If now, instead of the details of the picture on each square, a dab of color be placed on it corresponding to the general tone, the effect of the whole will pretty pearly agree with that of the original painting. It is probably this indistinct vision that insects actually possess. Mathematically it may be shown that to obtain anything like such perfect vision as human beings enjoy an eye constructed on the compound type would have to be of most impracticable size. In our eyes the Philadelphia Press. rays of light passing through a single lens form an image on the concave retina. The retina is built up of the sensitive terminations of the optic nerve, forming a kind of tessellated payement with 36,000,000 squares to the square inch. If our lens were of perfect shape and the pupil wide erough, the size of things which might be seen as distinct objects would be limited. seen as distinct objects would be limited by the distance of the nerve endings of the retina from one another. In order that two points may appear separate to the eye, by the distance of the nerve endings of the two points may appear separate to the eye, they must subtend an angle of about one minute of arc—that is, for instance, that fine lines ruled one twentieth of an inch apart can be made out to be separate at a distance of four yards. Beyond this the whole surface has a uniform gray tint. Calculations clearly show that insects cannot see nearly as well as this, and their behavior to distant objects favors this of the nineteenth century. A repetition opinion. But their eyes have this advantage of the subject races in tage—namely, that there is practically no lin it to the nearness of objects they can examine. Fine Groceries

OUR Advertising Man, at his dinner table, often hears of the "Mark Down Prices" frequently displayed by grocers near his home. The level-headed Miss who does the family marketing, fully praised goods that are selling "at tifty cents on the dollar." The low cost would seem to mean bankruptcy all along the line to Grocers, Wholesalers, Canners, and Producers. That should be a matter of regret rather than joy to the consumer, for unless labor has a due reward the average eater will surely feel the pinch upon himself in turn.

Our Advertising Man's family finds that "Cheap" goods on the The Guarantee Shoe Store, low price they cost is about thrown away. His family is sick of the whole miserable business, and their general verdict is, "Go to - & Co's where you get the best every time." There you pay for something that is worth having when you get it, and it is a comfort to trade with them. That is why we will do all our trade there in future.

The immortal Lincoln well said, "You may fool all the people some of the time, and some of the people all of the time; but you can't fool all the American people all the time," and our Advertising Man says the consumers of this Country are finding that out. The better dealers draw the better trade, because they supply the better goods. Faithfully yours F. A. FERRIS & CO.

The above advertisement of F. A. Ferris & Co. I wish to adopt as my own. I now have in Store for sale the Ferris Hams and Breakfast Bacon. In Consonance with the above advertisement and in conformity to my determination when I commenced business in Asheville to sell only the highest grade goods, I now have, and shall continue to offer for sale always, the best quality, the highest character of goods obtainable. The last two years of business depression has made it necessary for even the "Four Hundred" to "buy cheap." They have, as others sometimes "make a virtue of necessity," made it "a fad" to buy cheap." But they have not been satisfied nor will they or the American people ever be satisfied until they get the best.
